The screenshot shows the 'Career Wizard' web application. At the top, there is a header with the title 'Career Wizard' and a breadcrumb trail: 'You are here: > Home > Career Wizard'. Below the header, a paragraph explains: 'Career Wizard is designed to help you consider jobs and careers that relate to your qualifications and interests. Select from the categories below. You must choose at least one qualification level and one work skill.' The main content area contains five red buttons, each with a dropdown menu to its right: 'Select qualifications...', 'Select work skills...', 'Select subjects...', 'Select work settings...', and 'Select people...'. At the bottom of the form, there are two buttons: 'Search' and 'Clear all'. To the right of the form, there is a vertical stack of three circular images: the top one shows a woman and two children looking at a laptop; the middle one shows a hand holding a yellow folder; the bottom one shows a woman sitting at a desk with a laptop.

Below are the leaflets Career Wizard has matched to your personal details.

These are listed in order of how many factors in the leaflet match your criteria. However it is recommended that you look at all your results as some factors are more important than others.

Point to consider: Jobs that don't require specific subjects, or for which any subject is acceptable, may also come up in your results even though they may not be directly linked. For example if you choose 'English' as a favourite subject a job such as 'driving instructor' may come up as it matches your other criteria but doesn't specify any particular subjects so English would be acceptable.
